Dr. John Zaniwski has been employed with West Virginia University as a Asphalt Technology Professor since 1996. Through his dedicated work over the last 20+ years, he has worked hand-in-hand with the endowment funding organization, the Asphalt Pavement Association of West Virginia, the West Virginia Department of Highways, WV LTAP, and other transportation related organizations. The APAWV recognized Zaniwski's contributions to the asphalt industry by enhancing the endowment funds to ensure WVU will continue to have an asphalt technology program. Dr. Zaniwski has continuous research funding from the WVDOH for asphalt research since 1998. This research has been broadly implemented in the state for improving asphalt materials and construction.

In addition, he has served as the PI on several other research projects. He also serves as the PI for the WV LTAP, providing technical assistance to the WVDOH and local agencies, and for the Department of Transportation University Transportation Center.

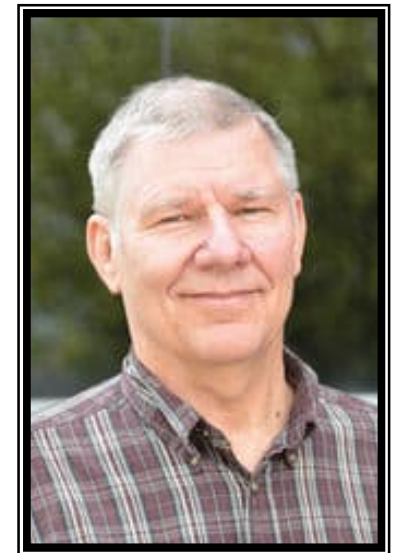

Dr. Zaniwski has two Ph.D. students and two MSCE students. It is interesting in this time of diversity that three-fourths of these graduate students are females! In recognition to Zaniwski's commitment to WVU, the college, and the department, he received the WVU Values Coin for the areas of service, curiosity, respect, accountability, and appreciation

Dr. Zaniwski is a proud graduate of the University of Texas where he earned all of his degrees. He also recognizes the value of a WVU education as all three of his children are proud Mountaineers. Dr. Zaniwski has been blissfully married to his wife Deborah since December 31, 1975.
